

The Gay Rag

A group of people are dancing in a pool of water. The scene is captured from a low angle, looking up at the dancers. The water is splashing around them, creating a dynamic and energetic atmosphere. The people are wearing casual, summer-appropriate clothing like tank tops and t-shirts. The overall mood is festive and celebratory.

E-mail your questions to nana@keywestgayrag.com

Dear Nana,

I am a 23 year old gay man and I am happily dating a cougar. He is 36 and he is perfect. He owns his own business, his own home, a great car and dresses impeccably. There's only one hitch. We've been dating 6 months and I'm ready to close the relationship and make it monogamous. He says he wants to still keep thing a little light and easy and give it more time before we make that sort of commitment. I see him almost every day, but most of the time he just comes to pick me up, have lunch or dinner, and then go back to his home for sex. Other than accidentally, I still haven't met any of his friends. I worry that he doesn't want to commit to me because of my age and place in life. Unlike him I don't own anything and live in a small place with two other roommates. How do I convince him that I'm the guy to settle down with?

-Boy Toy

Dear Boy Toy,

Jesus, Lord & Taylor! If 36 is a cougar to you, what the hell am I? A saber-toothed tiger?!?! But all kidding aside, I am going to give you a little blunt, tough love. Are you ready, angel?.... THE OLD QUEEN IS JUST USING YOU AS A CUM DUMPSTER... WAKE UP AND SMELL THE POPPERS!! I know you are young, sweet heart, but look at the "relationship" you just described to me: he picks you up, pays for a meal and then pokes you in the pooper. The only thing missing is the "money's on the dresser, sugar". If in 6 months you've only met other people in his life by accident, well, then that's NOT an accident! Did you also never consider that if he's made it to 36 as the perfect man and still doesn't have a full time lover, that THAT might also be a choice on his part? You need to take a good hard look at what you want. If you are okay going forward with this sort of relationship, then you're fine. But if not, you can't convince him or change him. You need to look at you this man really is, not what you imagine him to be. Sometimes we mistake any guy on a horse as "prince charming". And if that's the case, snap out of it, Mary!

Nana,

I read your column each month and really enjoy them. I was just wondering what is your history with love???

-Key West Florida Fan

Well aren't you sweet, sugar?! I'm glad you like my ramblings. I am currently single. And at my age, I don't plan on changing that anytime soon. This is the time in a person's life where, if they have already met a few of the loves of their life then it is safe to use up these last years really just enjoying the view. The last thing I want to do is worry about picking up some old fart's socks... or diapers! But I was married 3 times in my life. They are all dead now... or at least dead to me! My first husband I married when I was very young. But that was how it was done back in the revolutionary way. His name was Henry and I don't believe I ever orgasmed once during our 7 year marriage. But I don't think most women orgasm in their first marriage... that's why God created the 2nd and 3rd marriage. My second marriage was on a whim, and turned out just how you would expect a whim to turn out. He was a Greek man I met while on vacation. In me he found a devoted lover and a green card. In him I found a bi sexual and crabs. Enough said. The third one was a charm. His name was Harold, but everyone called him Budge. I still don't know why. He was loyal and funny and tender. He loved nature and music and was very tall with sky blue eyes and blonde, wavy hair. We didn't meet until I was 45 and he was 43 and I feel that was for the best. By then we had both ripened on the vine enough to do the whole marriage thing right. He passed on peacefully one night about 9 years ago. I miss him. But I'm supposed to. He was my husband. That's why I pray to God every day that those fuck nuggets in Washington will pull their head's out of each other's asses and let you kids get married like the rest of us. I want you all to have your own Harold's (or Henrietta's). It is my greatest wish for all my little gaybies.

Shake, Rattle, & Roll

by: Brad Loekle

Well, we knew it would happen again eventually... L.A. had another earthquake. And it was a "biggie". Or at least that's what the news kept trying to convince me of. Listen, I am not a heartless bastard (shut up, Gassy). I have a lot of very close friends in Southern California and, just like everyone else, my heart went into my throat when I first saw it flash across my screen that there had been a 5.4 earthquake outside of L.A.. But as the news teams started scouring the area looking for destruction I was relieved to find there really was no destruction! Thank God, right? We should be happy for once to not see dead bodies everywhere, freeways collapsed, and buildings on fire. But leave it to CNN to never let a good tragedy go... for the next week all I saw on CNN were constant reports of how people's homes were ruined by the quake. They would show footage of people's kitchens with the contents of their cabinets spilled all over the floor. No! Not the Captain Crunch?! That's it, there is no God! And then they'd show people's living rooms just littered with debris. The sad thing is that these earthquake ravaged homes looked a lot better than my own! It's sad when your lack of housekeeping skills can actually rival a natural disaster. And then they just kept showing that footage of Judge Judy! She had just begun to tape an episode when the quake hit. Proving once again that she is the only person on that show who didn't eat paint chips as a child; she was the only one who ran! And boy did she run. At one point I thought she was just gonna vault over the bench and run over the heads of mentally challenged courtroom. Screw Sally Fields, Judy should be the spokeswoman for Boniva!

But listen, even though I hate California and all it stands for, I am still very glad that we can joke about this earthquake. But to me, it just drives home the point that California should just be let go. We should allow it to live out its dream of sinking into the ocean in peace and relocate our "herd" back to the mainland. Now I know you are going to say, "Brad, you're just saying that because you are one of those bitter, New York comedians who hate everything that isn't New York." To which I would say, well, yes, and if you don't like it you can tongue kiss my fart box. But the truth is I've always hated California. My parents took me there when I was twelve. Just a short, pudgy little gayadolescent who thought I would fall in love with the state that held both the Castro AND Hollywood. From the minute we got there I knew something was wrong. First of all the air was so clean I could barely breathe. Then, when I ordered a BLT in a diner for lunch one day, the waitress said, "You know, little guy, bacon isn't good for you... you shouldn't eat too much of it." This of course prompted me to order an extra side of bacon off the breakfast menu and fake a heart attack when I was done eating it all. My parent's laughed hysterically, and the waitress cried hysterically... my work there was done. Then our California relatives made us travel the vineyards with them. We got on the "wine train" which for me was like the train to Auschwitz, but with wine and cheese tasting. For mile after mile I listened to glorified farmers describe the "personality" of their wines. Some were "naughty and bold" others were "delicate and shy". Now I myself, prefer a very crisp, light, cold wine... it's called Vodka.

And finally there was L.A., good Lord what sort of blood fart is that place anyway?? It's like "Logan's Run" with smog and cobb salads. We were there in summer, presumably because my parents liked watching their porky child sizzled in the sun like a ham steak. Though I can't imagine the winter being much better.... Unless all the people leave in the winter. It is sunny to the point of being offensive, the heat is unbearable and the people are ridiculous. We went to an organic market one day and I was trying to juggle avocados when a man came over and grabbed them from me and told me a needed to respect the integrity of the avocado. Are you fucking kidding me??! So, I did what any twelve year old could get away with, I punched him in the scrotum and yelled, "911! You're not my Dad!" at the top of my lungs. That will teach that hippie dippie Cali-freak to come in between a fat kid and food!

In the end, I know that it takes "different strokes, for different folks". If you want to live in a state that has enough sunshine to make it feel like you live in an easy bake oven and that is the geothermal equivalent of a roller derby rink... be my guest. But stop clogging up my news channels with pictures of your broken plasma screen TV and your busted 2 liter of Fresca! You are taking valuable time away from me finding out if Lindsay Lohan is really getting her kitty punched BY a kitty, or what Barrack Obama ate for lunch today! Now THAT is news!!!!

Brad Loekle can be seen on the TruTV series "The Smoking Gun Presents..." (Thursdays @ 9PM E/P). Listen to him on "Sirius Radio's OutQ in the Morning w/ Larry Flick" (Wednesdays 7-11AM). For a full listing of Brad's appearances and assorted other offensive material, go to: www.bradloekle.com or myspace.com/bradloekle

Something for Everyone at Womenfest '08

John C. Giuliano, Executive Director
Key West Business Guild
GLBT & Allied Chamber of Commerce Since 1978

Welcome to the 22nd Annual Womenfest Key West! The Key West Business Guild is honored to be the organization producing this legendary festival for women. Over 4,000 women are expected to converge from Tuesday, September 2nd through Sunday the 7th. There will be women-only parties, water & sightseeing excursions, cultural events and more.

In addition, male friends of Womenfest are invited to enjoy the Opening Night Party recognizing the 30th Anniversary of the Guild; Women Speak & The Guild 30th Celebration Luncheon with Keynote Speaker Beth Bass, CEO of Women's Basketball Coaches Association; party with live music from God-des & She and Sister Funk; Duval Street Fair; and Women Who Laugh featuring the irreverent comedienne, singer and songwriter Lisa Koch.

All of this year's happenings may be found in the Womenfest Event Guide located all over town and by visiting WomenFest.com. Please support the generous sponsors of WomenFest listed in print and online!

You also won't want to miss riding on the Key West Gay and Lesbian Historic Trolley Tour. Stop by the WomenFest Hospitality Suite at the Southernmost Hotel, on the corner of Duval and South Streets, or the Gay & Lesbian Visitor Center, 513 Truman Ave, for information about that tour and all of the WomenFest Official Events and Activities.

While in Key West, please also make use of the Guild's Brochure Map, Business Directory, and website GayKeyWestFL.com and support the GLBT & Allied businesses advertised there as well.

The Host Committee has planned a diverse, exciting and very full itinerary of activities for everyone to enjoy. Have a great time and please come back again soon!

In fact, make plans now to be here for the Guild's 26th Annual Headdress Ball, the Gayest, Official Event of FantasyFest. This year's "Raucous Caucus" will convene to "elect" the best headdresses amidst an elaborate production of live entertainment. Tickets are on sale now and are sure to sell out before the end of WomenFest. Visit Keystix.com to purchase

Pisces

Feb 19 – Mar 20

Damage To The Central Nervous System - a phrase you're going to be hearing a lot over the coming days. Don't worry, it's just a Key West thing.

Aries

Mar 21 – Apr 19

Jesus himself could not have done a better job than you will do today. Although Jesus would probably have a better idea of the correct tenses to use in the previous sentence.

Taurus

Apr 20 – May 20

Danger, excitement, thrills. Even spills. These are buzz words which may catch your attention this month, possibly in the form of a horoscope.

Gemini

May 21 – Jun 20

Today might see a need for you to call attention to yourself. We are happy to recommend faxing nude pictures of yourself to random numbers.

Cancer

Jun 21 – Jul 22

Sorry, it's a slow month for you, there's nothing much I can say that will make it any more interesting. This week will go well, except for the bits that don't. And not only will those bits go badly, but they'll go REALLY BADLY.

Leo

Jul 23 – Aug 22

Any dreams you have been granted recently will turn out to be hollow and easily shattered.

Virgo

Aug 23 – Sep 22

The more money you get this month, the more you realise you should be doing something more constructive with it.

Libra

Sep 23 – Oct 22

Damnation awaits you from every angle. Your only hope is to provide mankind with the cure for greed. This message was brought to you in association with Craaaazy Christians Inc.

Scorpio

Oct 23 – Nov 21

You may hear good news from an excitable old lady who may turn out to be drunk.

Sagittarius

Nov 22 – Dec 21

Exercise may seem like a dirty word, but until you lose some weight, fatty, it's the dirtiest word you're going to hear for a long time.

Capricorn

Dec 22 – Jan 19

Dancing around like a fairy is a great way to lose weight and strengthen those legs.
