LGBT Book Reviews by Terri Schlichenmeyer

“TOMORROW WILL BE DIFFERENT” BY SARAH MCBRIDE

c.2018, Crown Archetype | $26.00 | 288 pages

Things are never as bad as they seem.

There's always a brighter spot if you just look for it, always something to be thankful for, a way of making yourself feel better because things aren't as they seem. As in the new book “Tomorrow Will Be Different” by Sarah McBride, there's always a chance to make a change.

Though she was ten years old the first time she heard the word “transgender,” Sarah McBride knew from an early age that she was really a girl. Problem was, everyone around her saw her as a boy, and she didn't want to disillusion them because she didn't want to disappoint them.

And so, McBride tamped down a feeling of “homesickness” inside herself and she tried to be a boy by dating girls, joining a fraternity at college, and doing guy things that felt wrong. It wasn't 'til the end of her time as student body president at American University that she took the leap and came out, publicly, as a woman.

It was a relief, she says, and though there was some initial shock, her friends and family never stopped loving her. For that, she acknowledges her fortune; a high percentage of her LGBTQ peers aren't so lucky.

Not long after this major life-changer, McBride was accepted for a dream come true, landing an internship at the Obama White House. She'd been fascinated by politics since she was small and was a campaign volunteer in her home state of Delaware. Starting in the Office of Public Engagement, she was quickly engaged; activism, as McBride learned, was something she could sink her teeth into, as a trans woman.

Happier than she'd ever been, McBride's life continued to rise: she fell in love with Andy, whom she'd met at a party, though she didn't see him again until he emailed her months later. He was trans, too – a homegrown Wisconsin boy with a sense of humor, and she adored him. The future was bright.

And then things changed again...

There's a message inside "Tomorrow Will Be Different" – and it's not the activism one that you think is there.

Oh, there's no denying that author Sarah McBride is an activist and she's been a big part in making change, not only at state-level but nationally. She's a history-maker and a shaker. But this book isn't just about that.

Oh-so-subtly, McBride makes readers' brains itch. LGBTQ teens can be fragile, and you'll watch closer after reading this book. Health care isn't just an issue for the middle-class, and you'll understand better now. Politics aren't just something to rant about, and in the midst of all this, believe it or not, you may be better off than you think you are. This book forces a different way of looking at things, but you might not initially notice that as you're crying over the rest of this memoir.

So bring tissues while you read and let your brain itch. Let "Tomorrow Will Be Different" sink in because things can always be better than they seem.

MY BIG GAY LIFE

Brad Loefke

1 UP, 2 DOWN

Have you ever been hit on by someone so completely less attractive than you that it's actually an insult? Now before you all start sending emails (that I will not read, other than sarcastically, out loud, at cocktail parties) let's be clear that I didn't say unattractive, I said LESS attractive. And by a long shot. This brings me to my new theory: 1 Up, 2 Down.

In our move as a society to believe that all things are totally the same, we've lost track of the fact that not all things are. Our efforts to irradiate the insidious and corrosive ideas that someone's skin color or gender identity or sexuality makes them greater or lesser than has seeped into all areas of thought. So, for instance, when I'm 20 pounds overweight from where I'm comfortably healthy that is not the same as being only 5 pounds overweight. It's not the same "overweight". I accept that in myself and in others. So I would never look at some twink with a little extra BMI and say "we're twins!" And, thusly, I've had to school someone who was more than 300 pounds over weight when she said, boldly, in a restaurant full of friends, "Brad, us BIG girls have to stick together". Your comradery shouldn't feel like a cunt punch, dearie.

And so, most of my life, I've unknowingly followed a sexual formula that has been both very fulfilling and successful while, also, not being damaging to the egos and realities of all around me. Put simply, it's the idea that you should aim at fucking as much as one level "higher" than yourself or going two levels "lower" than yourself. It's basically a safe margin of error. Obviously this is all subjective and each of us decides what deems "higher" or "lower". But, let's also be honest... we kind of all know what I'm talking about. I wouldn't walk up to Zac Efron and just start assuming he's into me because I'm funny and a decent bottom. There are other factors involved and we all know that. For instance, there's a crazy homeless guy on my block who often tells me he'd gladly "Fuck my fat booty good". When he says it, for some reason, it doesn't fire up my cockles the way it would if, say, one of the Hemsworth brothers said it. And I don't care which one. Just pick a Hemsworth.

I had a guy hit on me recently, after a gig, whose teeth were the color and grain of mahogany. And I don't mean Diana Ross, Mahogany; I mean wood. His teeth also seemed to be in the middle of a family argument since half of them had already stormed out before I got there and the one's left behind were clearly in disagreement with each other. I don't know if it's that his eyes were so sunken in or that his face was just so puffed up... clearly from an allergic reaction to the alcohol, which he inhaled like air... but it's safe to say that moles had dreamier eyes than this guy. His constant, and peculiarly confidant, sexual advances of me reeked of his total delusion that we were basically sexually and esthetically equal. This was nearly as flooring and odious and idea as his breath... which was, like a baby's diaper that had washed up on a lakeshore at high noon.

Meanwhile, I picked a reasonably handsome guy with great eyes, a slightly awkward personality, and a muffin top but great pecs. We fit well within each other's 1 Up, 2 Down margin, had a drink, had a fuck, had pancakes in the morning and went on with our lives. 1 Up, 2 Down, people! It works every time!

MAN ABOUT TOWN

Sometimes, I wish I could talk about some of the amazing live theater we have in Key West. For a small city with relatively small venues, we have some of the best local theater I have ever seen.

Unfortunately, also due to the small population of Key West, these shows run for a relatively short time so by the time this magazine goes to press, any show that I can write about has already ended.

For once, this is not the case.

In all the years I have lived here, I never recall a show being brought back for a second year, but not all shows are this exceptional.

Now I should start by saying that I was never a big Broadway queen. I absolutely adore live theater but I have never felt the desire to see every Broadway show just because I'm gay.

My first exposure to Avenue Q was actually at karaoke many years ago. Someone began singing "If You Were Gay" and I was intrigued. Later that evening I found out that the song was from the show Avenue Q so I had to see this show. You can only imagine my excitement when I found out that it would be playing on our little island last year.

MAN ABOUT TOWN

I made sure I was there opening night and I was not disappointed.

I don't want to spoil the show for anyone but imagine if Sesame Street actually dealt with real world problems, real world adult problems. Avenue Q addresses real world problems with the innocence of puppets. While none of the puppeteers are hidden, they quickly become invisible as they bring their puppets to life through song.

With songs called "I'm not wearing underwear today," "The internet is for porn," "You can be as loud as the hell you want (when you're makin' love)," and "Everyone's a little bit racist" you can only imagine this is not your average puppet show.

If that isn't enough, add in 80's child star Gary Coleman as the building superintendent adding even more camp to the show.

Avenue Q has won three Tony awards for Best Musical, Best Score and Best Book.

Avenue Q is playing at the Waterfront Playhouse on Tuesdays through Saturdays from March 29 - April 14. With a short three week run, shows will sell out quickly. Call the box office at 305-294-5015 or buy tickets online at www.waterfrontplayhouse.org.

Make the short walk down Duval to Avenue Q and you will see that "There is life outside your apartment."

STAY SAFE RIDE SMART

A bicycle is a great way to get around, but stay safe by following the rules of the road.

- A bicycle is like any other vehicle, so you must follow the rules of the road.
 - Bicycles must follow all traffic controls such as signs and signals.
 - Bicycles cannot travel the wrong way down a one way street.
 - Bicycles must be ridden on the right hand side of a two way street.
 - You must signal all turns with hand signals.
 - Headsets cannot be worn while cycling.
 - Riding a bike while under the influence can get you a DUI in Florida.
- Lights are required between sunset and sunrise
 - A white light is required in front and a red light in the rear.
- Riding on the sidewalk or crosswalk is permitted but with these provisions
 - Pedestrians have the right of way. Yield to pedestrians.
 - When passing pedestrians, you must signal your intent before doing so.
- Anyone under the age of 16 must wear a helmet.

Here are a few additional tips that you may find helpful.

- Lock up your bike at all times. If not, you'll probably be walking home.
 - Pass the lock through the frame and the front tire.
 - Be careful not to lock your bike to an adjoining bike by accident.
 - If you lock your bike to private property, it may be impounded.
- When approaching occupied cars, be ready to react if the door opens.

Spilling the hottest tea in Key West

Until our phone gets turned off for non payment, we'll be here to listen to the latest dish. We'd never use real names but I'll bet if you ask around, you'll find out who's doing who! If you have some hot gossip, email us at tea@qkeywest.com. We'll keep your name out of it because we know how to keep secrets!

Expansion is always good, but we will see if the concept works in the pink triangle.

I've said before that the sheriff's website seems to be more active than Grindr but lately, quite a few well known locals are making the "most wanted" list. Since nothing exciting goes on here, it doesn't take much to make that list though. Probably forgot to pay a jaywalking ticket.

This year was quieter than most for the hustler migration into town for the winter but the few that it has brought down made a big impact very quickly.

With the quieter season due to Irma, it seems some employees are finding creative ways to make some extra coin. Some through creatively making their bars fun, others by offering discounts to special customers. Remember girls, if you take free drinks from a bartenders, don't act outraged when that person is no longer employed at that bar for not ringing drinks in.

Dear Nana,

I'm trying to inspire my partner to spring clean with me. He tends to be a bit of a pack rat and at least every two years I need to get him on board with cleaning house otherwise we'll end up on an episode of Hoarders. Any suggestions on how to get him into it without it being a big fight?

That's a tough one, sugar bear. Because the only time I've ever seen someone successfully inspire people to clean was when Mary Poppins used witchcraft to trick those children into cleaning their room. That's what happened, right? So maybe just use witchcraft. We're close enough to the Caribbean so get a Voodoo priestess to put some sort of curse on your partner. For everyday he doesn't help you clean, his dick will shrink an inch. That should do the trick. Unless you find he's really committed to not cleaning, in which case the joke will be on both of you when you still have a house full of crap and he's hung like a light switch.

Since voodoo could backfire on your relationship, how about good, old fashioned incentives? Maybe tell him there is money hidden in certain over packed closets and he has to clear them out and organize them to find it. Let's face it, there's probably a $20 in an old pair of jeans anyway so you don't even have to hide new money! Or promise him treats for completing tasks: you'll make him his favorite dinner, you'll bottom for once, you'll let him fuck the bartender he's had his eye on and dick pointing towards for a few months. Whatever it takes, Mary! Be creative and open-minded!

Dear Nana,

If you had to choose between youth and beauty, which would you choose?

Well, since both left me long ago, I guess we'll be working from memory on this answer! Actually, this isn't a tough one for me. I'd take beauty. Because beauty isn't just about being young, or sexy, or having great teeth and tits. Beauty is a way of being. Jane Fonda is as beautiful now as she ever was. Liz Taylor was beautiful at any weight. So beauty can be eternal and tends to draw people's attention more than youth on it's own. They're right when they say, "youth is wasted on the young". And even if you don't waste your youth, it's going to be spent up before you know it. Once it's gone it's gone for good. So I say stick with beauty, be it inner or outer or better yet BOTH. Take care of yourself, inside and out, and that will show the world just how beautiful you are.

DO YOU HAVE PROBLEMS? OF COURSE YOU DO! WHY NOT LET NANA HELP YOU?!
