HAIR SHIRTS

by: Brad Loekle

Are we done with Kim Davis yet? Are we done with County Clerks and bakers and auto mechanics for Christ? I hope so. I really do. I know I'm preaching to the choir here when it comes to civil liberties versus religious freedom. And, of course, it's worth noting that what these people are practicing isn't really religious freedom. Religious freedom is your right to say that I'm a filthy faggot who'll burn in hell because your God says so. And you can say it and the government won't break in your door and burn your house to ground or hang you by the neck until you're dead. You can think it, say it, but you can't discriminate.

I know there's a lot of talk about America becoming more and more extreme in its religious beliefs. It would seem that way if you don't look closely. It would seem like Kim Davis going to jail rather than resign from her job is some sort of extreme Christian martyrdom. But it really isn't. And frankly, if I were religious, I'd be twice as extreme. If I honestly believed with my adult brain that there was a singular, parent-like being that created and controlled the universe... and that it had written a book with all the rules on how to be it's favorite pet... you would be sure as shit that I'd follow it to the letter! I mean it would seem crazy not to. If Oprah came up to you and said I'm going to give you 100 million dollars if you just do these 75 things for me: don't eat bacon or shrimp cocktail, don't wear blended fabrics, don't fuck other dudes, don't touch menstruating women, etc.; of course I would! You would too! And that's only money. God is allegedly promising eternal peace and happiness. So I get why religious people take it so seriously. I don't get why none of them seem to take it seriously enough. Let's face it: Christians who believe in a loving, peaceful god who doesn't hate gay people or condone rape are definitely cherry picking the bible. So are the ones who only seem to focus on gay sex and abortion and not on giving away all their money or loving their gay neighbor. Everyone cherry picks religion and always seems to do so in their own favor.

Long ago, Christians used to beat the crap out of themselves just to get nearer to Christ. They used to wear a Cilice. A Cilice is a shirt made out of coarse animal hair that would rub and chafe their body's raw. They did this to understand the suffering of Christ. They would fast themselves into starvation, eat the scabs of the sick, blood let, give away all earthly possessions. They were the ultimate groupies for God. So the Kim Davis's of the world aren't martyrs or even followers of a Christian God. They're the reader's digest of Christianity. Christians used to let themselves be eaten by lions rather than renounce their religion... Kim Davis won't even risk going 6 months without health insurance for God. She puts her "whole life" in "God's hands" but apparently doesn't think he'll reward her with a new job if she resigns in his name.

That's why I, personally, don't listen to modern-day religious types on any side of any argument. You want to tell me that being gay is a sin and I need to change? Great, well then you better show me your bloody, chaffed nipples from your Jesus H. Christ Hair Shirt! Because if you're nipples aren't bleeding for Christ, then I'm not listening!

To the Kim Davis's of the world I say, "Put your nipples where your mouth is!"

ZACHARY MOSES : MAN ABOUT TOWN

I've been watching the housing market in Old Town increasing in value for 5 years. The longer I've waited, the more I've started quietly freaking myself out. I fear that I am missing my opportunity to buy, so last week I decided it was time to visit Doug Mayberry Real Estate, and start looking for a new home.

Doug told me that they had just listed a $7.4 million home, and I couldn't resist adding it to my list. I was surprised when I first saw it, it seemed I was at the wrong address. This home (1017 Southard) was large and pretty, but I'd been expecting something huge and gaudy for $7.4 Million.

Then I walked through the gate. This property is huge! I had no idea that private homes on this much land exist in Key West. I'm amazed this historic home has been kept intact and authentic. Most huge Key West homes, have long ago been converted into hotels, having their original charm gutted out.

When looking to the back of the property, I saw a private gated driveway coming from a side street. I couldn't help imagining myself as a movie star with my own quiet compound. Here I'd be hidden away from the pestering of paparazzi.

Surrounding a huge mosaic tile swimming pool, there are three separate guesthouses. I would do almost anything to own this property. It's a bit out of my journalist price range, so I will unfortunately have to sell my mother into slavery to buy it. She will understand.

If you are interested in viewing homes in Key West, you can reach one of the agents at Doug Mayberry Real Estate located at 1075 Duval St. Suite C23. Call them at 305-292-6155 or visit DougMayberry.com.

After my tour around the island, I made my way back to my house. I was meeting Dave Harris, who owns a company called Mercury Bicycle Fitting. Dave makes house-calls to pre-fit customers to their bikes before they buy them. He uses super scientific equipment to match the customer to the perfect brand and size. He then makes micro measurements that you can give to your local bike shop, so that when your bike is assembled, it is the perfect for you.

Since we do very little driving here in Key West, it's always important to have the right fit when commuting around on pedal power. Dave's process is easy, fun and affordable. You can reach Dave at 305-432-0018 or visit MercuryBicycleFit.com

Once Dave was done fitting me, I went to Higgs Beach for some relaxing sunshine and swimming. When I got there, I met a woman named Pamela who was selling ice cold coconuts. She just got the permit from the city, and will be there every day selling this obviously amazing local treat. Drop by and tell her I sent you!

Faith Michaels Drops Her "Panties"

The Second Single From Her Full Length Album, The Pop Album

Faith Michaels' second single from her album of pop-oriented songs mixes camp, comedy, and sensuality with playfully strong dance beats. "Panties is a track I began writing a few years ago but something wasn't working," reveals Michaels. "Luckily, producer Michael Cosculluela came to the rescue, adding some fun sounds and putting the song back on track." "Panties", from Faith' Michaels' s "The Pop Album", is available now on iTunes.

"I love everything about panties," continues Faith Michaels from her Key West home. "The way they feel when you slide 'em on and off. The way they hug the body and derriere! I have so many too: G-string, crotchless, lace, even time-of-the-month panties! You can always tell which are mine because they smell of vanilla."

Faith Michaels burst onto the club scene three years ago when "Fetish", her first single, won music video of the year in Germany. Her next single, "Neva Eva Eva" received nominations from Canada's RightOutTV. And last year, "Work That Body" hit the Top 40 on the iTunes dance chart.

In 2015, Faith Michaels' teamed with producer Michael Cosculluela for her first full-length album of pop-oriented songs. Titled "The Pop Album," the record offers a slew of danceable club tracks, including "Crooked," the first single that came out this winter, featuring Faith singing alongside drag superstars Nina Flowers and Power Infiniti.

"I wanted Panties to be next because it's really like no other song on the album," explains Faith Michaels. "It has that bachelorette's-hanging-out-with-gay-boys summertime feeling that I think will get everyone tossing their panties in the air!"

She says she's surprised it taken so long for a party dance song to come out. "Panties and partying go hand in hand."

She points to the gay men stripping down to their colorful funderwear at clubs. "Why shouldn't they have fun showing off their colorful briefs? It's liberating! Anyone can wear white drawers but if you're sportin' panties, oh bitch, look out! There's some sexiness going on!"

"Panties", from Faith' Michaels' "The Pop Album", is available now on iTunes. For more information, visit FaithMichaels.com. Follow Faith Michaels on Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, and Youtube.

"Too Fast to Live, Too Young to Die: James Dean's Final Hours"
by Keith Elliot Greenberg

c.2015, Applause Theatre & Cinema Books $24.99 304 pages

The minute you glimpsed the red-and-blues, you knew you were sunk.

Yep, and now you have a traffic citation to pay for stepping on it, having a lead foot, a pedal to the metal. You knew better than to exceed the speed limit, but you couldn't resist and, as you'll see in the new book "Too Fast to Live, Too Young to Die" by Keith Elliot Greenberg, that need for speed may drive you to the grave.

Markie Winslow, Jr. adored his cousin, Jimmy.

A few years older, Jimmy played with Markie and took him on motorcycle rides, but they never went too fast. With Markie, Jimmy wasn't reckless, though he pushed the limits of it on his own. People in their hometown of Fairmount, Indiana, didn't care – they loved James Dean because he was a local boy who'd done well.

No one was surprised that Dean ended up in Hollywood or that he became a star: he'd always loved to act. He'd entered and won contests, performed in church plays, and had eschewed prelaw classes in favor of a coveted spot in a UCLA production of Macbeth. It was obvious where his career path was taking him.

And it took him there quickly. In just a short time, Dean was a heartthrob movie star, had performed on the new medium of television, and had gained a fiancé and enough money to indulge in the hobby of auto racing. When a guy signed movie deals for six figures, $7,000 wasn't much for a car and he had his eye on a Porsche 550 Spyder, one of just a few made. He'd almost gotten arrested just looking at the car one night. What else could he do but buy it?

Overjoyed with his prize, he'd started to break the car in but some doubted that it was a good purchase. Others told Dean to be careful in that car, that it was dangerous, that it could kill him, that it would kill him.

And on September 30, 1955, it did....

Though its subtitle indicates a small focus of subject matter, "Too Fast to Live, Too Young to Die" is more comprehensive and expansive than merely a few hours. That has its plusses and its minuses.

A little background is always a good thing, especially when you're reading about a star who made only three movies and died six decades ago. Author Keith Elliot Greenberg finesses that backstory - including Dean's childhood, his rumored bisexuality, his odd on-set genius, and his rascalion attitude - but Greenberg unfortunately combines it with fan-gushing from folks who traveled to Fairmount to partake in a James Dean festival. That's charming at first but it becomes fligid, and quite overdone.

Still, if you're a fan and can ignore that, you'll appreciate this book and its marking of a sad anniversary. If you own the iconic poster or t-shirt and want to know more, you'll find that here, too. In either case, "Too Fast to Live, Too Young to Die" may be just the ticket.

Dear Nana,

I'm currently unemployed. It's a real pain in the ass. Anyway, my Mom & Dad are trying to guilt me to move home for a bit to save money. They're about 90 minutes away from where I currently live so it would make it harder for me to look for a job in my own town. How do I politely say "No"?

You don't. Not politely anyway. You accept this as the death trap that it is. No normal, healthy parent wants their adult child to move back in with them. And if they do, they certainly don't say it out loud! Job or no job, other than illness there is no good reason to live with your parents after 18. Look what happened to Little Edie Beale for God's sake? Is that what you want for yourself: to be feeding your mother off-brand paté while she undercooks corn on a hot plate for a rough trade homosexual drifter that you nickname "The Marble Fawn"? Because that's what you're looking at here, kiddo. Take a job at BJ's Wholesale if you have to, but stay the hell away from your childhood bedroom or your parent's basement. I'm sure they love you and they think they're offering something helpful. But the truth is they're also probably utterly tired of looking at each other's faces every damn day for 42 years and are looking for any sort of distraction. Don't let them make you their distraction. Besides, you really think you're going to get laid when you tell hot guy at the local bar that you're currently unemployed... but it's okay, you're saving a lot of money by living in your parent's house. Instant boner killer, my dear. Instant. Boner. Killer.

*Dear Nana,
Do you ever fear death?*

Well I didn't until I got your very creepy, yet concise, letter! Jesus, way to scare an old lady, ya psychopath! But the truth is I don't. I don't see any use in fearing something you have no say over and that will happen to all of us. I don't like the idea of pain, so I've made sure everyone in my life knows that I'd like to medicate out of my ever-living mind! I want the good stuff, too! None of this Vicodin or pharmaceutical stuff, I want the hardcore stuff. Get me some black tar opium or some heroin that was smuggled across the desert on a horse with no name. I want to go out of this world so high that I think Frank Sinatra is singing into my vagina and that I can taste the color 9.

*Do you have problems? Of course you do!!
Why not let Nana help you?! Send your questions to:
Nana@keywestgayrag.com.*

Aquarius

Jan 20 – Feb 18

I'm not saying you're a slut but the average American male has 7 sexual partners in their lifetime. For you, that's a slow night.

Pisces

Feb 19 – Mar 20

OK, you're fat. There, I said it. I can't take it back so it's out there now. Go eat a pizza and get over it.

Aries

Mar 21 – Apr 19

Before you talk trash about another person, look in the mirror!

Taurus

Apr 20 – May 20

Stop trying so hard to find a husband. He'll find you when the time is right. That should be right after a lot of plastic surgery.

Gemini

May 21 – Jun 20

You keep complaining about being broke and having no money. Then you keep turning down extra shifts at work because it hurts your "quality of life." You know what's good for quality of life? Eating!

Cancer

Jun 21 – Jul 22

If there is one good thing I could say about you it's

Leo

Jul 23 – Aug 22

I know you want the simple solution and you want just a simple pill to help you lose weight. Well, there is a simple pill and it's called exercise!

Virgo

Aug 23 – Sep 22

You're doing all the right things. You're on PrEP, you carry condoms, you use good quality lube, now you just need someone willing to sleep with you.

Libra

Sep 23 – Oct 22

You're a little hung over today and that's OK. You did some foolish things last night and that's OK. You may not want to look at You Tube today, that was not OK.

Scorpio

Oct 23 – Nov 21

You may want to start brushing your teeth once in a while. I can see what you've had for dinner for the last 3 days.

Sagittarius

Nov 22 – Dec 21

It's always difficult when your phone breaks and you lose all of your contacts. We have your entire contact list here for you. Your mother's number is 305-555-1122.

Capricorn

Dec 22 – Jan 19

Oh dear Capricorn, you are always the last here on the whore-o-scopes, much like you're entire life.
