MAN ABOUT TOWN

I

It always feels like Key West takes a little siesta in September. The island slows down a little, some businesses close up for a while to take a break, or freshen up a bit, and you can usually find a decent parking spot!

October brings in new life and new energy. This year has not disappointed.

A new addition to the island is Moondog Cafe & Bakery located at 823 Whitehead Street. This street side cafe just went through a massive renovation and they could not have done a better job. Moondog is owned by Dominique and Jamille whose names you might recognize from the other two restaurants they own, Banana Cafe and The Cafe, so you know the quality is great. I had to check it out for myself, and honestly, it was so good that I went there 4 times in 8 days! One of the most cruel things they have done however, is put the fresh baked goods just at the door as you are leaving. I'm guessing that was more to make it easier for people to walk in and grab something delicious and go, but for me, it was a hateful temptress calling at me as I was leaving, begging me to eat three meals worth of calories in 30 seconds. It is totally worth 4 hours on the treadmill!

One of my favorite restaurants is making a move to just off Duval. Flaming Buoy has moved to 424 Eaton Street and if you have ever eaten there, you are in for a treat. While we all know they love Star Wars, having a new location gives them the opportunity to really go all out with the Star Wars decor. Food and service should be the same but now at a great location.

Something else is new just a few doors up on Eaton. The Tropic Theater just went through a complete update with new flooring, new paint, new lighting, refurbished bathrooms, but still hosting the best in independent and mainstream movies. Don't forget, Tropic Cinema features a great wine selection and their popcorn is available with real butter!

The more things change, the more they stay the same. All of these "new" places all feature the best that Key West has always offered.

IMPORTANT SAFETY INFORMATION

What is the most important information I should know about BIKTARVY®?

BIKTARVY may cause serious side effects:

- ▶ Worsening of hepatitis B (HBV) infection. If you have both HIV-1 and HBV and stop taking BIKTARVY, your HBV may suddenly get worse. Do not stop taking BIKTARVY without first talking to your healthcare provider, as they will need to monitor your health.

Who should not take BIKTARVY?

Do not take BIKTARVY if you take:

- ▶ dofetilide
- ▶ rifampin
- ▶ any other medicines to treat HIV-1

What are the other possible side effects of BIKTARVY?

Serious side effects of BIKTARVY may also include:

- ▶ Changes in your immune system. Your immune system may get stronger and begin to fight infections. Tell your healthcare provider if you have any new symptoms after you start taking BIKTARVY.
- ▶ Kidney problems, including kidney failure. Your healthcare provider should do blood and urine tests to check your kidneys. If you develop new or worse kidney problems, they may tell you to stop taking BIKTARVY.
- ▶ Too much lactic acid in your blood (lactic acidosis), which is a serious but rare medical emergency that can lead to death. Tell your healthcare provider right away if you get these symptoms: weakness or being more tired than usual, unusual muscle pain, being short of breath or fast breathing, stomach pain with nausea and vomiting, cold or blue hands and feet, feel dizzy or lightheaded, or a fast or abnormal heartbeat.

- ▶ Severe liver problems, which in rare cases can lead to death. Tell your healthcare provider right away if you get these symptoms: skin or the white part of your eyes turns yellow, dark "tea-colored" urine, light-colored stools, loss of appetite for several days or longer, nausea, or stomach-area pain.

The most common side effects of BIKTARVY in clinical studies were diarrhea (6%), nausea (5%), and headache (5%). Tell your healthcare provider if you have any side effects that bother you or don't go away.

What should I tell my healthcare provider before taking BIKTARVY?

- ▶ All your health problems. Be sure to tell your healthcare provider if you have or have had any kidney or liver problems, including hepatitis virus infection.
- ▶ All the medicines you take, including prescription and over-the-counter medicines, antacids, laxatives, vitamins, and herbal supplements. BIKTARVY and other medicines may affect each other. Keep a list of all your medicines and show it to your healthcare provider and pharmacist, and ask if it is safe to take BIKTARVY with all of your other medicines.
- ▶ If you are pregnant or plan to become pregnant. It is not known if BIKTARVY can harm your unborn baby. Tell your healthcare provider if you become pregnant while taking BIKTARVY.
- ▶ If you are breastfeeding (nursing) or plan to breastfeed. Do not breastfeed. HIV-1 can be passed to the baby in breast milk.

You are encouraged to report negative side effects of prescription drugs to the FDA. Visit www.fda.gov/medwatch, or call 1-800-FDA-1088.

Ask your healthcare provider if BIKTARVY is right for you.

Please see Important Facts about BIKTARVY, including important warnings, on the following page.

LGBT Book Reviews by Terri Schlichenmeyer

“DEATH CHECKS IN” BY DAVID S. PEDERSON

c.2018, Bold Strokes Books | $18.95 | 235 pages

A nice little getaway.

That’s all you wanted: two days alone, just you and your amour, with nothing to do but follow your whims. It would be perfect, idyllic – until it wasn’t, and Responsible You won out over Romantic You. As in the new novel “Death Checks In” by David S. Pederson, it’s back to work.

Detective Heath Barrington had it all planned out: he and his boyfriend, Officer Alan Keyes would take the train from Milwaukee to Chicago, grab a cab to the downtown area, check into the Edmonton Hotel, and enjoy a wonderful weekend.

It was 1947 and being gay could get a man in trouble, but Heath knew there’d be more anonymity for him and Alan in a larger city. The weather would be perfect for exploring nightclubs and sightseeing; there was plenty of entertainment nearby and a live show with a band inside the Edmonton. That, of course, meant that Alan would need a tuxedo so Heath offered to purchase one for him – which was when the men met Victor Blount, haberdasher.

Blount was a small man with a French accent and a dramatic way about him. He said he was an expert tailor, that he dabbled in photography, and that he could secure “discreet” entertainment for Alan and Heath. That was odd, but Blount wasn't the only character at the Edmonton: the hotel's assistant manager was a blustery guy who had his eye on one of the regular guests, a "full-figured," flirty widow from New York. A dotty old lady from nearby came to the Edmonton often enough for waitstaff to know her preferences. And the one-eyed piano player and his songstress-wife left an impression on Heath by arguing loudly with Blount, who seemed to be overcharging them.

Two days. That's plenty of time for a romantic rendezvous, had Heath left work alone. But when Blount was found dead in his back room with "W" scrawled on the floor in his blood and a spool of green thread in his hand, two days was also long enough to solve a crime...

Strictly looking at "Death Checks In" as a mystery, it's not bad. That it's a noir whodunit is nice, the main characters are familiar from past books, it has that old-black-and-white-movie feel you know you love, and it's sweetly chaste, in a late-1940s way.

Charming, in other words.

But tedious also describes this novel just as equally since a lot of its action comes through dialog, of which there too much and in too much fussy, stiff detail. It's wordy and it feels like filler. It doesn't help that author David S. Pederson added an eccentric old woman in this story, who constantly clucks like a chicken.

Yes, that's written into numerous sentences.

No, it's not fun.

Overall, if you can avoid doing that "speed it up" movement with your hand, or if you like noir mysteries that are more on the light side, only then will this book fit. For you, then, "Death Checks In" is a worthwhile getaway.

MY BIG GAY LIFE

Brad Loekle

A TALE OF TWO TURKEYS

Growing up we used to split Thanksgiving between my mother's family and my father's family. My father's family, the Loekle's, were the most peaceful, white family you've ever met. And not a fake peaceful white, like you see in The Virgin Suicides or Connecticut, but a genuinely happy, white as hell, family. My great grandmother, Lucy, was the supreme matriarch. She belonged to the Audubon Society and The Grange and served our meals on fine china and silver. This was always the first Thanksgiving of the day. Lucy, or Grammy as I knew her, was a perpetually ancient woman so Thanksgiving "dinner" was promptly at noon. The only time I ever remember there being anything but laughter and love at that dinner table was during the Great Sweet Potato Debate of 1989. Voices were raised in fervent debate as to whether the "candied yams" Grammy had been making for 50 years were, in fact, candied sweet potatoes. Her two sons weighed in with "interesting articles" they'd read in this naturalist magazine or another about this seasonal carbohydrate confusion. After a lively five minute conversation, Grammy firmly put her fork and knife down to say, "Listen, son, I'm not going to debate this anymore. If I say they are yams, they are yams. The end." And thus ended the Great Sweet Potato Debate of 1989 and the only fight I ever say at a Loekle family holiday.

Around five o'clock each, we'd then cross Bergen County, New Jersey to enter into the Pandora's box that was my mother's family gatherings. My mother, one of seven sisters, belonged to a very loud tribe. And Irish woman had married an Italian man and had then set out to give life to, and then subsequently destroy, seven little girls in a row. Holidays at the Rossi house often made Running with Scissors seem like a rom-com. The key was to arrive early enough to get the good party of the crazy before the bad part kicked in; because when it kicked in it kicked in full tilt boogie. There's was a giant dining table that sat all eight daughters, two parents, 4-6 aunts and uncles, and my other great grandmother: Noni. Noni was an ancient Italian woman with weather, warm hands who spoke broken English and used to sing dirty Italian songs that none of us understood but we knew were raunchy and delightful.

There were countless debates and degradations at a Rossi Thanksgiving. Boyfriends were kicked out by parents, parents threw glassware at other parents, old wounds were carved up and open like well dressed birds, and we all knew Thanksgiving was finished when my grandfather would storm into his bedroom and barricade the door with the dresser, so as not to let the women in his life that he hated so much get at him.

If The Great Sweet Potato Debate of 1989 was the greatest fight in my father's family home, then Philip Glass the Turkey was the greatest debacle in my Mother's family home. This was also in the late 1980's... what can I say, they were heady times? The tide had turned in the psych ward that was the Thanksgiving dining room on Rolling Ridge Road. I had taken my usual position of neutrality underneath the dining room table. From here I could listen to the family fray as if it were an old timey radio drama. Comeplete with the sound effects of glasses braking and doors being slammed. A physical struggle had begun over the turkey between my grand parents. I can't recall why, but I'm sure it was insane. Behind their seats at the head of the table, sat a bay window that looks out on the steep rolling hill of a back yard. Suddenly the sound of one scream followed by what sounded like a car wreck. Not an entirely inappropriate sound effect for any Rossi family gathering. Our poor, half eaten turkey had fled the scene of the crime straight through the bay window and down the rolling hill.

Later that evening, when some of my aunts snuck me out into the back yard with them to get away from the drama, we sat cross-legged around the turkey with a small wireless radio playing the Rolling Stones "She's So Cold". And as my aunts lit up a joint, we began to laugh about the day's events, our insane family, and this poor turkey who had thought his pain was over once he was slaughtered and cooked. Only to find there was still a war for this undead soldier to fight. We named him Philip Glass the Turkey and buried him under the autumn leaves to rest in peace.

The End.

Brad Loekle was a semi-finalist on NBC's "Last Comic Standing". He can be seen every week on TruTV's "World's Dumbest", has written for Joan Rivers on E! "Fashion Police" & tours internationally. His book, "My Big Gay Life" is available on Amazon and at www.bradloekle.com

THE INQUISITOR

Spilling the hottest tea in Key West

Until our phone gets turned off for non payment, we'll be here to listen to the latest dish. We'd never use real names but I'll bet if you ask around, you'll find out who's doing who! If you have some hot gossip, email us at tea@qkeywest.com. We'll keep your name out of it because we know how to keep secrets!

You would have thought Trump was visiting again with all the outrage over there being no theater open to see "A Star Is Born" on opening night. Calm down ladies, this is a laid back island and it's coming!

The new parking stickers seem to be right behind with complaints about only getting 4 hours of free parking at the city lots. This is the same as it's always been, you just need to get a slip now from the machine.

A few locals are either eating the Key Limes, or are just becoming more bitter on their own.

The illusion of success is alive and well in the Keys. We need to find a new term. Even Splenda Daddy is giving some of these guys too much credit.

What's the story with the new local that caused that big scene? We know alcohol was involved but there's no way that was the only thing!

ASK NANA

E-mail your questions to nana@keywestgayrag.com

Dear Nana,

I'm cooking Thanksgiving dinner for my friends and family for the first time. It's going to be 15 people and I've never cooked for more than 8 people at a time. Do you have any tips for how to pull this off without ruining my life and everyone's holiday?

Well you've certainly bit off a big chunk of holiday horror, haven't you? Okay, here's my best advice, coming from someone who usually has twenty or more people to cook for at the holidays: Do almost everything ahead of time. And I mean everything. The turkeys, the sides, the desserts, almost everything can and should be made the day before. So plan on taking the entire day before to cook in peace and quiet without all those loving assholes buzzing around your head. Everyone gravitates towards the kitchen at a party and that's the last thing you want when you're trying to not commit a murder on Thanksgiving. You'll need more than one turkey so here's my advice with that: forget carving up a bird at the table. It's a pain in the labia and no one really cares. Cook the birds the day before and then simply reheat them, pre-carved, on sheet trays doused in turkey stock right before you're ready to serve the meal. If you want to move even faster and be all Martha Stewart, look up how to spatchcock the bird first. It's not as sexual as it sounds, trust me.

Most sides can be made ahead of time. Or at least assembled and half cooked. For green bean casserole, mix it all together and let it sit in fridge overnight. Then cook the day of. Biscuits or breads should be made on the day you serve them. Gravies can be made the day before with your spatchcocked-up birds. All desserts you should make the day before so you just have to reheat them if they need it.

This will leave you A LOT of free time and wiggle room in case anything goes wrong. It will also save you some grey hairs and at least 2 secret bathroom cries.

Oh and always plan on having twice as much wine and booze as you think you need. People are a lot more forgiving about the food, and the company, if you get them good and saucy first!

Dear Nana,

I've never deep fried a turkey myself, but I've had it before and it's amazing. But my roommate says it's insane for us to try and deep fry a turkey. What do you think? Should we be adventurous or play it safe.

There's a reason why you've never done it yourself. And a reason why your Nana or Pop Pop never showed you how. And that reason is because only assholes deep-fry their turkeys. Stop watching Guy Fieri wagging his frosted tips around as he deep-fries everything from waygu to water. Trying to deep-fry a turkey is the leading cause of burning down your goddamn house on Thanksgiving. Is that what you want? You want to be homeless for Thanksgiving? Or be giving thanks to the burn unit at the closest major hospital to your now-on-fire house? You're roommate is correct. If you want fried turkey for Thanksgiving, either hire a professional chef or go live at a state fair.

DO YOU HAVE PROBLEMS? OF COURSE YOU DO! WHY NOT LET NANA HELP YOU?!
