LEZ

You would think that the crisp fall weather was approaching with all of the bears in town for the Key West Bear Weekend this November! I think we should have a Butches Weekend for us lesbians, don't you?! I would love it. Lots of flannel and tattoos. Yes, please. I am an elder gay, so says the lesbians of TikTok, and I come from a very old school (like 1950's and 60's) love of the butch/femme dichotomy. I am what was once considered to be a high femme. Hair is always done, makeup, dresses, pretty nails and highly feminine presenting. Yes, I'm often confused for straight even though I've been out since I was a child which is markedly longer than almost all of my lovers. I have always been deeply attracted to the butch lesbian, you know, the ones that would NEVER pass as straight even in a dress and makeup. Le sigh. PE teachers, business women, blue collar butches. They should be honored. I know I am a dying breed and that in this day and age labels shouldn't matter but I call myself what I am comfortable with and identify as, and LOVE it. I love my label... and I love butches. Yes, my wife knows this. She's butch - imagine that. I appreciate the butch visibility in a world where we have been hard to find. I knew I was gay when I had a crush on my tall butch female PE teacher and not the tall handsome male PE teacher even though I think they could have actually shared clothes! A young girl growing up, saw my butch and it gave her the freedom to express her butchness that was as inherent as her eye color. She stopped hating herself when she saw a grown up version of herself. That makes my heart sing and that is exactly why we need a Butches Weekend. Can we make this happen?? I think we need a butch in charge.

Here in Key West we honor all types, sizes, genders, labels and editions of what a Human Being can be. Many many years ago JT Thompson started the notion of One Human Family on this island and it was officially adopted by our mayor at the time, Jimmy Weekly in 2000. To quote the official website: On the first day of the new millennium, an artist in Key West, Florida started printing and handing out free ONE HUMAN FAMILY stickers. It even was unanimously adopted as the inclusive official philosophy of the City of Key West! More than one million stickers sent out worldwide later, it has become an international grassroots movement to unite all people and guarantee everyone equal rights, dignity and respect.

It is the notion that: All religions, nationalities, classes, races, genders, abilities, orientations... we are all a part of each other. Our future as a race depends on us coming together as one.

This is what I love about my island home and it includes gender, sexuality and sexual expression. This article is for the bears and the butches, recognizing them in particular this month. While you're in town this month, stop in to the Key West Business Guild on 808 Duval St. Say hi to Fritzie, she's right at the front desk on the left as you walk in. The Key West Business Guild is our LGBTQIA Resource center in town that features as many gay owned and gay friendly businesses in Key West as choose to join. There are A LOT!! It's a great place to stop in and find out about the restaurants, shops and tours that you may like to support because they also support you. You can get One Human Family bracelets and bumper stickers there. Sometimes they even have really cool t-shirts to purchase that also help support the Business Guild.

If you weren't aware of our resource center, I hope you'll stop in now and choose gay owned and gay friendly establishments in the Keys to give your dollars to. The more they flourish, the more will be available to us all in the future. So Lez Go Out, honor the butches and Bears and support One Human Family in the Keys! Feel free to take this notion back to wherever you are from and spread the love like wildfire. Oh, and send the Butches down to Key West.. we need to create a plan...!

LGBT Book Reviews by Terri Schlichenmeyer

"GENDER PIONEERS: A CELEBRATION OF TRANSGENDER, NON-BINARY AND INTERSEX ICONS"

BY PHILIPPA PUNCHARD, FOREWORD BY CHRISTINE BURNS MBE

c.2022, Jessica Kingsley Publishers | $22.95 | 118 pages

It's always a good idea to know where you're going – but then again, getting lost can have its benefits, too. Veering off an easy path gives you a chance to see things, maybe even something better. You can get all kinds of directions for life but sometimes, as in "Gender Pioneers" by Philippa Punchard, you just gotta step off the road.

In 1912, French audiences were thrilled by the talent of a trapeze artist known as Barbette. The lovely Barbette flew over the heads of Parisians solo, gracefully, and the best citizens followed those performances avidly. By 1919, Babette added to the end of the performance the revelation that "she" was really Vander Clyde Broadway, a male performer.

We might think that being transgender is "new" and just "a Western thing," but Punchard has reason to disagree: history is dotted with men passing as women, and women living as men. As Christine Burns says in the foreword, "Trans people are not a new thing."

Some seemed to do it as a means to an end: Ellen and William Craft wore clothing of the opposite sex in order to escape slavery in 1848. Betty Cooper may have worn men's clothing for the same reason in 1771. Neither case, says Punchard, indicates "classical" trans behavior, but we'll never know for sure.

Biawacheeitchish, who grew up to be powerful, wealthy, with four wives, was kidnapped as a young girl and was encouraged by their Native American adoptive father to engage in male activities, perhaps because he'd lost two sons; in another time and place, Biawacheeitchish would've been called a "female husband." Dora Richter, the first woman to receive vaginoplasty, was killed by "a Nazi mob." Dr. James Barry, a highly renowned surgeon, used "built-up shoes and... padding to appear more masculine..." James Allen and Billy Tipton were both married to women before death revealed that they were female. And Mary Read was a girl, until their mother lost her only son...

In her foreword, Burns says that there are "two awkward challenges" when we talk about trans people in history: were they intersex, rather than trans; and were they people – mostly women – who presented as the opposite gender to gain the benefits of the opposite gender? The questions demand more study and "Gender Pioneers" offers a launching point.

Open this book anywhere and you'll see that the theme here is serious, but author Philippa Punchar also lends a bit of breeze. There's no certain order to what you'll read, and while the entries reach back to ancient times, they focus more on the past three hundred years or so; each of the articles are short and to-the-point, and the soft illustrations invite browsing. For readers who want a quick read, this works.

Be sure to keep going through both appendices of this book, where you'll find a wealth of further information and dates to remember. Historians and readers of trans history will find "Gender Pioneers" just right.

Brad Loekle

TURKEY LURKY TIME

It's that time of year when America gathers all of the family they love (and some of the family they hate) together to enjoy a fatty feast to honor an imaginary dinner that didn't really happen between a group of Native Americans and their soon-to-be murderers. Pass the stuffing, kids!

Now, personally, I prefer to celebrate this imaginary time of year with my family of friends, as much of my biological family is either dead or dead to me. And each year, as I prepare far too much food for a bunch of people who won't eat it (I live in West Hollywood so eating in front of other people is strictly prohibited), I think about the first people to fist a turkey. Because, lets face it, that's what we're doing. We're fist fucking poultry. When did this start? Why did we feel the need to go elbow deep into our birds? Listen, I'm no fan of birds. To me, all birds looked like coked-up dinosaurs and I just don't trust them. But that doesn't mean I want you to turn them into edible Muppets. But somewhere in history, my guess is during the Henry VIII times, we started the practice of making our fowl into a Folsom Street Fair event. Henry fucked everything he could get his hands on... including fucking his own mouth with enough food to give him gout. So, my money is on that old perv being the one to have the thought that it would be fun to shove a buttered-up loaf of stale bread up a duck's ass.

All this being said, I absolutely love stuffing and love eating birds that have been stuffed. But here's a controversial culinary take: I make and keep all my stuffing outside of the bird. Which, I guess, technically makes it dressing. I like to stuff my bird with flavorful veggies and fruits and herbs. My turkey requires a black-belt in bottoming as I shoved buttered up onions, carrots, and even a halved lemon right up is back seat. Or her back seat. Or their backseat. Even though I live in West Hollywood, our Butterballs don't come with pronoun labels... yet. And though I will gladly defile and devour the bird... I do want to respect its identity. So, I just assume my Turkey Lurky is a Mx instead of a Mister or a Miss. Actually, I'd prefer it to be a Mister. I'd like to think of my turkey as a cis white male who I'm now punishing with my buttered-up fist for all of his turkey privilege. Like the fact that Thanksgiving is the ONE day of the year that chickens get left the fuck alone.

Oh, I also have a vegan coming to my Friendsgiving dinner. So, if anyone has any ideas on how I can fist a rutabaga, I'd appreciate it! I don't like vegans feeling left out on the festivities.

ASK NANA

E-mail your questions to
nana@keywestgayrag.com

Dear Nana,

I've been seeing a guy long distance for two years that I've never met in person. We started talking online during the pandemic so it wasn't really possible. Plus, I live in Key West and he lives in Seattle. Now he's really pushing me to fly out there to meet him. But I'm nervous we won't have the same great energy in person that we have on the phone. Should I go for it?

Well, sugar tits, what are your other options, really? I mean it's not exactly "taking a chance" to meet a guy you've been facetime masturbating with for two years. Hell, in the gay world, you're already married! But seriously, you have to shit or get off the pot with this man. Either you're both going to take this long-distance dalliance all the way into the bedroom or it's time to move on. Though, if he tells you that he's an African prince who just needs you to wire him $5000 in order for him to claim his inheritance and build a life with you... UNSUBSCRIBE.

Dear Nana,

Two of the guys I've been sleeping with just started dating each other. I don't know if they both know that they've both been fucking me, on and off, for months. Should I tell them? Is it wrong for me to tell them or not to tell them? What should I do?

How good is the sex with either of them? If it was good to great with both of them... I'd tell them just to see if they were open to a throuple! Or at least they could keep you as a side piece. But if the sex was just okay, no need to bother. They'll either realize you were once both of their side bitch or they'll ignore that truth and build their gaylationship on a bed of silence and lies. (Which will just make fucking them both when they break up sexier for you).

DO YOU HAVE PROBLEMS? OF COURSE YOU DO! WHY NOT LET NANA HELP YOU?!
