Descovy®

emtricitabine 200mg/
tenofovir alafenamide 25mg tablets

YOU MATTER AND SO DOES YOUR HEALTH

That's why starting and staying on HIV-1 treatment is so important.

What is DESCOVY®?

DESCOVY is a prescription medicine that is used together with other HIV-1 medicines to treat HIV-1 in people 12 years and older. DESCOVY is not for use to help reduce the risk of getting HIV-1 infection. DESCOVY combines 2 medicines into 1 pill taken once a day. Because DESCOVY by itself is not a complete treatment for HIV-1, it must be used together with other HIV-1 medicines.

DESCOVY does not cure HIV-1 infection or AIDS.

To control HIV-1 infection and decrease HIV-related illnesses, you must keep taking DESCOVY. Ask your healthcare provider if you have questions about how to reduce the risk of passing HIV-1 to others. Always practice safer sex and use condoms to lower the chance of sexual contact with body fluids. Never reuse or share needles or other items that have body fluids on them.

IMPORTANT SAFETY INFORMATION

What is the most important information I should know about DESCOVY?

DESCOVY may cause serious side effects:

- Buildup of an acid in your blood (lactic acidosis), which is a serious medical emergency. Symptoms of lactic acidosis include feeling very weak or tired, unusual muscle pain, trouble breathing, stomach pain with nausea or vomiting, feeling cold (especially in your arms and legs), feeling dizzy or lightheaded, and/or a fast or irregular heartbeat.
- Serious liver problems. The liver may become large and fatty. Symptoms of liver problems include your skin or the white part of your eyes turning yellow (jaundice); dark "tea-colored" urine; light-colored bowel movements (stools); loss of appetite; nausea; and/or pain, aching, or tenderness on the right side of your stomach area.

- You may be more likely to get lactic acidosis or serious liver problems if you are female, very overweight, or have been taking DESCOVY for a long time. In some cases, lactic acidosis and serious liver problems have led to death. Call your healthcare provider right away if you have any symptoms of these conditions.
- Worsening of hepatitis B (HBV) infection. DESCOVY is not approved to treat HBV. If you have both HIV-1 and HBV and stop taking DESCOVY, your HBV may suddenly get worse. Do not stop taking DESCOVY without first talking to your healthcare provider, as they will need to monitor your health.

What are the other possible side effects of DESCOVY?

Serious side effects of DESCOVY may also include:

- Changes in body fat, which can happen in people taking HIV-1 medicines.
- Changes in your immune system. Your immune system may get stronger and begin to fight infections. Tell your healthcare provider if you have any new symptoms after you start taking DESCOVY.
- Kidney problems, including kidney failure. Your healthcare provider should do blood and urine tests to check your kidneys. Your healthcare provider may tell you to stop taking DESCOVY if you develop new or worse kidney problems.
- Bone problems, such as bone pain, softening, or thinning, which may lead to fractures. Your healthcare provider may do tests to check your bones.

The most common side effect of DESCOVY is nausea. Tell your healthcare provider if you have any side effects that bother you or don't go away.

Ask your healthcare provider if an HIV-1 treatment that contains DESCOVY® is right for you.

What should I tell my healthcare provider before taking DESCOVY?

- All your health problems. Be sure to tell your healthcare provider if you have or have had any kidney, bone, or liver problems, including hepatitis virus infection.
- All the medicines you take, including prescription and over-the-counter medicines, vitamins, and herbal supplements. Other medicines may affect how DESCOVY works. Keep a list of all your medicines and show it to your healthcare provider and pharmacist. Ask your healthcare provider if it is safe to take DESCOVY with all of your other medicines.

- If you are pregnant or plan to become pregnant. It is not known if DESCOVY can harm your unborn baby. Tell your healthcare provider if you become pregnant while taking DESCOVY.
- If you are breastfeeding (nursing) or plan to breastfeed. Do not breastfeed. HIV-1 can be passed to the baby in breast milk.

You are encouraged to report negative side effects of prescription drugs to the FDA. Visit www.fda.gov/medwatch, or call 1-800-FDA-1088.

Please see Important Facts about DESCOVY, including important warnings, on the following page.

IMPORTANT FACTS

This is only a brief summary of important information about DESCOVY® and does not replace talking to your healthcare provider about your condition and your treatment.

MOST IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT DESCOVY

DESCOVY may cause serious side effects, including:

- Buildup of lactic acid in your blood (lactic acidosis), which is a serious medical emergency that can lead to death. Call your healthcare provider right away if you have any of these symptoms: feeling very weak or tired, unusual muscle pain, trouble breathing, stomach pain with nausea or vomiting, feeling cold (especially in your arms and legs), feeling dizzy or lightheaded, and/or a fast or irregular heartbeat.
- Severe liver problems, which in some cases can lead to death. Call your healthcare provider right away if you have any of these symptoms: your skin or the white part of your eyes turns yellow (jaundice); dark "tea-colored" urine; loss of appetite; light-colored bowel movements (stools); nausea; and/or pain, aching, or tenderness on the right side of your stomach area.
- Worsening of hepatitis B (HBV) infection. DESCOVY is not approved to treat HBV. If you have both HIV-1 and HBV, your HBV may suddenly get worse if you stop taking DESCOVY. Do not stop taking DESCOVY without first talking to your healthcare provider, as they will need to check your health regularly for several months.

You may be more likely to get lactic acidosis or severe liver problems if you are female, very overweight, or have been taking DESCOVY or a similar medicine for a long time.

ABOUT DESCOVY

- DESCOVY is a prescription medicine that is used together with other HIV-1 medicines to treat HIV-1 in people 12 years of age and older. DESCOVY is not for use to help reduce the risk of getting HIV-1 infection.
- DESCOVY does not cure HIV-1 or AIDS. Ask your healthcare provider about how to prevent passing HIV-1 to others.

HOW TO TAKE DESCOVY

- DESCOVY is a one pill, once a day HIV-1 medicine that is taken with other HIV-1 medicines.
- Take DESCOVY with or without food.

POSSIBLE SIDE EFFECTS OF DESCOVY

DESCOVY can cause serious side effects, including:

- Those in the "Most Important Information About DESCOVY" section.
- Changes in body fat.
- Changes in your immune system.
- New or worse kidney problems, including kidney failure.
- Bone problems.

The most common side effect of DESCOVY is nausea.

These are not all the possible side effects of DESCOVY. Tell your healthcare provider right away if you have any new symptoms while taking DESCOVY.

Your healthcare provider will need to do tests to monitor your health before and during treatment with DESCOVY.

BEFORE TAKING DESCOVY

Tell your healthcare provider if you:

- Have or had any kidney, bone, or liver problems, including hepatitis infection.
- Have any other medical condition.
- Are pregnant or plan to become pregnant.
- Are breastfeeding (nursing) or plan to breastfeed. Do not breastfeed if you have HIV-1 because of the risk of passing HIV-1 to your baby.

Tell your healthcare provider about all the medicines you take:

- Keep a list that includes all prescription and over-the-counter medicines, vitamins, and herbal supplements, and show it to your healthcare provider and pharmacist.
- Ask your healthcare provider or pharmacist about medicines that should not be taken with DESCOVY.

LGBT Book Reviews by Terri Schlichenmeyer

“THE ADA DECADES” BY PAULA MARTINAC

c.2017, Bywater Books | $15.95 | 165 pages

Tick. Tick. Tick.

Your grandmother used to warn you not to wish your life away. The years pass quickly enough, she said, so hold each minute. Savor what you have. Enjoy your days, months, years, and “The Ada Decades” by Paula Martinac.

Ada’s daddy needed help around the house.

Once, that was Clay, Jr.’s job but he was busy with high school things, so twelve-year-old Ada fetched Daddy’s tools - which was what she was doing when she found an envelope with naked-lady pictures and a postcard of black men hanging from a tree. She took those pictures from the toolbox, even though she knew she shouldn’t, and she approached the only person she could trust: her school’s librarian, who explained how things were before the War.

Ten years later, things were still that way. It was 1957 and, as Central Charlotte Junior High’s new librarian, Ada watched, paralyzed, while police escorted the school’s first black student down the halls. Ada embraced integration, but she hadn’t known what to do. She wished she’d had the self-confidence of the English teacher, Cam Lively, who’d welcomed the frightened girl with a smile.

Ada understood fear, that was true. She'd always known she was different, but women weren't supposed to be that way about other women. She didn't know exactly how to say what she felt, but she knew it was wrong – that is, until Miss Lively invited Ada to a “book club” that was really just a gathering for gay men and lesbians.

There, Ada found friends, a tribe, and someone to love.

But Ada was from the wrong side of the tracks, her parents were poor, and she felt it. Cam came from money, and neither woman's family approved of the relationship. The pressures they felt in 1962 – the need to hide and keep quiet - were almost unendurable; indeed, some friends couldn't take it anymore. How much easier their lives would be if they could just be themselves!

Readers may notice the word “romantic” on the cover of “The Ada Decades,” but that's one of the lesser aspects of this novel. Yes, there's a bit of a love story here, but it's more fictionalized history than anything.

Beginning with a young girl's early understanding of racial discrimination, author Paula Martinac tells a multi-layered tale from the perspective of an often-humorless, rather prudish, and complicated character. Spanning nearly seventy years, the story is appealing, surprisingly chaste, and based within accurately-told historical events - but there's no Forrest Gump here: for Ada and Cam, the outside world is there for commentary, but not always for participation. Instead, Martinac's characters are everyday women, living pleasantly normal lives, and their story ends in a satisfyingly quiet way.

The cover of this book is no grabber and that's too bad because the story itself is, starting on its first page. If you're in the mood for a nice, gentle surprise of a tale that lacks drama and graphic scenes, “The Ada Decades” will tick all the boxes.

MY BIG GAY LIFE

Brad Loekle

“LONELY”: THE LONELIEST WHALE IN THE WORLD

Now, this is not the title of some terrible Reba Macintyre sequel to her song “Fancy”. This is a real animal. I know last month I was obsessed with lesbian polar bears.... Who still regularly pop up in my browser history. But now I’ve moved on to whales. A night with a few martinis and one article about a whale washing up on a shore in Europe led me down the proverbial rabbit hole of whale articles. And that’s where I found LONELY. Lonely is what U.S. Naval researchers have named a whale they’ve never seen, but have heard for more than 20 years. A whale that, in 20 years, they say has never found a mate. They believe it’s because Lonely is a male whale whose mating calls are at a decibel higher than most male whale calls. In fact, his high pitched (lispy) whale calls are at a frequency that no other whale species even hear or listen to. This poor, poor queen.

I know it’s stereotypical for my to say that this high pitched whale must be a gay dude, but let’s be honest... stereotypes come from somewhere. Granted, my own voice isn’t what most would call “high pitched”. In fact, it’s often been compared to Bea Arthur and Harvey Feinstein fucking on a freight train. Vivid, yet accurate. But the fact remains that many gay men do have a linguistic style and pitch that sets us apart from the other peasants of the world. And it would seem we’re not alone in the animal kingdom. Apparently there’s at least one whale out there screaming “Yaaaaaaaaaaaaaas, Queeeeen!” at the top of her baleens. I immediately sympathized with Lonely. Not that I’m lonely but we’ve all known this whale. He a goodtime girl who enjoys a vodka soda with a splash of cranberry. He’s the life of the party but not the whale you want to migrate or mate with. Such is the life of the Lonelys of the world. The life of the party is also, very often, a party of one.

Well I say fuck the other whales, Lonely! And fuck the Navy! Don't let them just turn you into the Precious of the high seas. There is nothing saying that Lonely is actually Lonely. Maybe he doesn't want to be a daddy. God knows I'm horrified that as I stumble towards forty, more and more young gay men are calling me "daddy". I mean, It's not like he and another gay whale can just adopt a bottle nosed dolphin anyway... which I assume would be their equivalent of an adorable "ethnic" child. Maybe Lonely is having a fucking ball out there! He's free to flip his fins anyway he wants, singing out at Celine Dion frequencies and eating whatever he wants because no one is around to fat shame him. Third helpings of krill? WHY, YES I WILL!

So I say let's all be a lot more like Lonely. Let's never forget that however much progress we've made as a community that we made most of those strides by marching to the beat of our own drums. By walking against the crowd instead of with it. By singing at our own, lovely, lispig, fairy frequencies. You don't need a mate to make you happy. And you certainly don't need to have children to be of value to the world and to enjoy all it has to offer. Lonely's out there singing his tits off. And sure, his mating songs haven't been answered in 20 years. But every time you're dancing and singing along to Madonna or Beyoncé doesn't mean you necessarily want some dude coming up and grinding on you. Sometimes you're singing just for the joy of the song. So sing on, Lonely! I've got your humpback, girl!

MAN ABOUT TOWN

Those that know me know that I am not a fine dining connoisseur. I am just as happy with a hot dog as I am with a fine filet mignon. With that in mind, I tend to gravitate towards places that have good food at a good value.

This last month was no exception. For a healthy breakfast, I like to hit Cafe Havana right on Duval Street. With my simple tastes, I love getting egg whites, with a side of bacon, and a fruit cup. Even though this is my "go to" meal, it's never boring because the fruit cup selections change all the time. Being a creature of habit, it's nice to have some variety while still maintaining consistency.

On those rare (ok, maybe not so rare) times that I am not watching what I eat, nothing hits the spot like a Key Wester breakfast sandwich from Cuban Coffee Queen. Scrambled eggs, bacon, and cheese on a pressed Cuban roll. Add in an iced coffee made with coffee ice cubes so it still tastes like coffee by the time you walk a block down Duval on a hot summer day and all the ice melts.

I am a good New England boy and once in a while, I need a taste of home. You won't find a more authentic Maine Lobster Roll anywhere other than DJ's Clam Shack. Anyone that's ever had a true New England lobster roll will tell you, the only way to serve it is on a buttered and toasted hot dog roll. What's ironic is that I have paid more for a Maine lobster roll in New England than I pay in Key West. Maybe the lobsters found a cheap air fare to get down here.

For dinner I continue looking for the best bargains where I can get a big meal for the best price and for that, you just can't beat El Siboney. This is probably the most authentic Cuban fare on the island and you will not leave hungry. Huge portions, great selection, and enough buttered Cuban bread to feed a family of 4, and I'm in heaven. There is enough food that you'll probably need to take some home. I say probably because I seem to have no problem devouring the meal, the salad, every piece of Cuban bread in the basket (they offer to refill it but I decline knowing I would eat that too) and it takes every bit of strength I have to decline the flan for desert. Quite often, I am too weak to fight it and the flan is gone just as quickly as it's delivered.

At this point, I usually wish I could walk home to burn off some calories, but at the same time, have trouble even making it to the car without laying down and taking a nap on the street.

Whether you need fine dining, or inexpensive fare, Key West has it all. You just need to know where to look.

Hello Naked Guys!

Welcome to Bone Island Bare it All in Key West. Whether it is your first time or you've been here so many times you've lost count, we are really happy you are here (hope it shows). Pup (Kevin) and I are ready for a fun time, and we hope you are also ready for a great long weekend.

We always have lots of great events and this July is no exception. Make sure you check out the full schedule here in Q Magazine or on our website. You will not want to miss anything; after all, you can always sleep when you get back to home. The not-to-miss event is the full moon cruise Friday night. A boat load of naked men, a bar (do not forget it's cash only), DJ Nick (we know you will not forget him), the stars and the moons. It sure sounds like heaven to me.

We excited to introduce naked yoga on Friday July 7th 11:30-1pm at Bikram Yoga Key West. This is the hot yoga, and not just because the class will be full of you guys. Email bikramyogakeywest@gmail.com to sign up.

Don't forget that Key West is an island, so make sure you get out and try some of the water activities – naked, of course. You do not want to go back home lighter then when you left home. There is the always popular paddleboarding with Cody of Nomadic SUP (remember to also watch you balance), or try out his small group boat tours. The BluQ catamaran boat trips offer an always relaxing day or evening and are great for making new friends. Find out more about these activities on our website.

As always if you have any questions or need any assistance please do not hesitate to talk with us. We are always happy to share our island with you. Welcome!

Dean, The Naked Realtor

PS: And remember if you love the island as much as I do and want to find a home in Key West, drop me a line at TheNakedRealtor@NakedKeyWest.com.

ASK NANA

E-mail your questions to nana@keywestgayrag.com

Dear Nana,

I can't bear to watch or read the news anymore. I'm totally burnt out and really broken by the state of things. But I also feel guilty when I don't stay on top of what is going on in the country and the world. Do you have any advice on how to balance these two things? Help!!!

Oh honey, I know exactly how you feel. Luckily, I've lived long enough to feel like the world is falling apart at least two dozen times. And somehow, whether because of mankind or in spite of it, the world didn't fall apart completely. Sure, it cracked a little. It got bruised. There were definitely casualties. But like Liza always belts... the planet spins and the world goes round and round!

Here's the good news (potentially) there's nothing you can do about the big ticket stuff in life, most of the time, so try not to let that ruin your day. The masses elect a shitty mayor or governor or president, a misguided lunatic blows up innocent people, an earthquake takes out a city. Chances are you'll find out about these things whether you turn on CNN the second you wake up or not. So give yourself a break and don't seek out misery that you can't undo. Also, to make yourself feel better (and we should all do this when we see news of that magnitude) decide one little thing you can do to help out. Maybe it's $5, $10, or $20 to the Red Cross or a relief group working on that particular problem. If we all gave $5 each time we felt helpless in the face of world events, not only would we feel a little better, the people in need sure would get a lot more help a lot quicker. If times are lean and you don't have $5, see if you can give some time. We all make time for the things we decide are worth it. People forget that soup kitchens and food pantries don't just need volunteers at the holidays (which is when most of us stop and think about those less fortunate than ourselves). They need help 365 days of the year. We all have a few of those 365 that we could spare, here and there, to help others out right around us.

Also, focus on your community. That's a lot easier than trying to tackle the globe. And community can mean where you live, the tribe of people you identify with, or even just your personal friends and family. I hate to break it to you but neither you nor I is going to get a president impeached on our lonesome. Nor are we going to save all the oceans on the planet with the click of a computer mouse. But we can work and get involved with our local and state governments, many of which need our help so they can stand up to the big guys and the big causes. And though you're not going to get all the plastic out of the Atlantic this weekend... you could go down to the water, take a nice relaxing stroll, and while you're strolling... pick up some of the crap people put into that precious ocean. You'll feel better for a bunch of reasons.

Also, when all else fails, wine does not...

DO YOU HAVE PROBLEMS? OF COURSE YOU DO! WHY NOT LET NANA HELP YOU?!
